Capstone Guides Proaxis Therapy in Acquisition of Major League Physical Therapy

Capstone Strategic, Inc., a growth engineering firm providing external growth strategy and advisory services, announced today that Proaxis Therapy, LLC of Greenville, SC has acquired Major League Physical Therapy of Piedmont, SC. Capstone provided Proaxis with advisory services in this transaction, which is consistent with Proaxis' proactive regional growth strategy.

Major League Physical Therapy was owned by former Major Leaguer Marty Clary, who will continue in a Clinic Director role with Proaxis. Clary pitched for the Atlanta Braves from 1987-1990. After his playing career, he returned to school to become a Physical Therapist. In 2005, he started Major League Physical Therapy. "I am excited about my decision to join forces with Proaxis Therapy. Proaxis has proven to mirror the values and quality that I pride myself in as a physical therapist, as a business owner, and as a member of this Piedmont, Powdersville, and Easley community," said Clary.

Proaxis' certified specialists and research scientists treat professional caliber athletes from every major sport. Proaxis has developed the nation's largest sports residency program. Burton Johnson, Vice President of Business Development for Proaxis, adds, "We are very fortunate to welcome Marty and his team. Marty is highly respected for his clinical skills and the personal connection he establishes with his patients. We also appreciate the guidance that Capstone gave to us throughout this process – it is a partnership that will bear fruit for many years."

"This acquisition expands Proaxis' market-leading presence in upstate South Carolina," added Capstone's Managing Director John Dearing. "In the coming months and years, we are looking forward to helping Proaxis continue to become more entrenched in this community, in Colorado, and beyond.”
